Profiles for levels of care

Each resident is an individual in his or her own right. He or she may not fit exactly into one specific level, rather, have characteristics that encompass two or more. Determination of the appropriate level of care is based primarily on the amount of time required to meet the individual's need. The following are just general guidelines.

LEVEL I

The resident needs occasional assistance or reminders with some but not all activities of daily living, such as: ambulating, toileting, bathing, dressing, and eating. The resident is able to remember place of residence and can find way around building or floor; is generally alert and oriented to person, place and time; may be mildly forgetful and occasionally require reminders; only occasionally needs cues to accomplish simple tasks or uncomplicated intervention for inappropriate behavior.

LEVEL II

The resident needs substantial support with some, but not all, activities of daily living or minimal support with any number of activities. The residents on level II may be more forgetful than level I but responds to staff who offer assistance with medications or accessing social or recreational services. Staff may need to ensure intervention of frequently disruptive behaviors. The resident may need doctor's appointments on a regular basis.

LEVEL III

The resident on this level may require comprehensive support as frequently as needed to compensate for any number of activities of daily living deficits. The resident may be bladder and or stool incontinent and require considerable assistance with this problem. The resident may be wheelchair bound but is still able to transfer from bed to wheelchair. In addition, a person appropriate for this level of care may have severe dementia and require staff to provide ongoing therapeutic intervention to ensure appropriate behavior.
